Biography

Jacky Rosen has served as a United States Senator from Nevada since 2019, representing the state in the upper chamber of Congress as a member of the Democratic Party. She assumed office after defeating incumbent Republican Dean Heller in the 2018 general election, flipping a seat that had been held by the GOP. Rosen currently serves alongside fellow Democrat Catherine Cortez Masto, giving Nevada an all-Democratic Senate delegation.

Prior to her election to the Senate, Rosen represented Nevada's 3rd congressional district in the United States House of Representatives for a single term from 2017 to 2019. Before entering elected office, she worked as a computer programmer and software developer, and served as the president of a synagogue in Henderson, Nevada.
